Train to be a Main man

To complement its brand new range of SEDBUK Band A rated boilers, UK boiler manufacturer Main is offering free product training for installers at one of its specialist training centres.

The one day course, run by qualified trainers, includes an introduction to the Main Combi Eco and Main System Eco, as well as the other boilers in the Main range. Installation, commissioning, servicing and diagnostics will also be covered, along with an overview of current legislation, Building Regulations, system design and condensing theory.

Jim Boyce, Sales Director for Main, says the training courses are part of the company's service and support package for installers and are proving to be very popular. "The Main brand is exclusively available through independent merchants for one off installers, and we take great pride in the support we offer our customers.

"The new range of boilers has been designed and built to be easy to install and straightforward to service, and the feedback we are getting from installers certainly backs that up. And their customers like the boilers' clean lines and user-friendly controls – and the lower fuel bills that come with excellent energy efficiency."

To book your place on a Main training course at one of our specialist training centres nationwide or to find out more about the Main Eco range of boilers, please visit www.mainheating.co.uk or call 0844 871 1570.
